No Summer Break from Hunger

Dear Friend,

When school doors close for the summer, something else quietly closes too.

For thousands of children across our community, school isn't just a place to learn. It's where they receive the meals they count on every day. Breakfast and lunch provide not only nourishment, but stability. When summer begins, those meals disappear almost overnight.

At the same time, grocery bills rise. Parents and grandparents are suddenly faced with providing two or three additional meals a day, every day, all summer long. For families already working hard to make ends meet, that added pressure can be overwhelming.

That's why your support is so important right now.

Thanks to caring neighbors like you, the Food Bank of Northwest Louisiana is preparing for the summer months by working with local partners to provide nutritious food to children and families when they need it most. Through community distribution sites and summer meal programs, children can continue to receive the food they rely on even when school is out.

These meals do more than fill empty plates. They help children stay healthy, energized, and ready to return to school in the fall prepared to learn and succeed.
